TETRAZZINI SINGS IN STREET.

Prima Donna Heard by 100,000 People in San Francisco Christmas Eve.

San Francisco, Cal., Dec. 27.—Fully 100,000 persons crowded the streets Saturday night in the neighborhood of Lotta's fountain, at Market and Third, to hear Miss Tetrazzini sing.

The affair, unique in the history of song, was one probably that could not have been possible in any other big city in the United States. The weather was clear as that of a night in June, and wraps and umbrellas were left at home. Green fire was burned on the newspaper and other big buildings, and when the diva appeared on the stand near the fountain she was cheered to the echo. She sang "The Last Rose of Summer," and the waltz song from "Romeo and Juliet," and the great audience roared its appreciation. All vehicle service was suspended for an hour.

When the police began their investigations, they found that in his haste the thief had dropped behind him a bundle of wigs, false beards and other disguises.

ENDED HIS OWN LIE, HAD THREATENED WIFE

Edward Carter of Concord, N. H., Was Flourishing a Revolver, When Someone Called the Police to His House.

Concord, N. H., Dec. 27.—In response to numerous calls by telephone, the Concord police went to the Plains district late last night to find Edward Carter, who was described as flourishing a revolver and threatening his wife. Two searches by the police failed to disclose the whereabouts of the disturber, and about midnight they came across the body of Carter, with a bullet hole through the temple.

The dead man lived about a mile from the so-called Plains district, in a most remote part of the village. He had been for some time employed as a job taster, doing odd jobs in and about town. As far as could be learned, his family relations had always been most pleasant until last night, when he had some kind of an altercation with his wife, got ugly suddenly, and began such murderous demonstrations that a neighbor thought it expedient to telephone for the police.

POULTRY SHOW OPENED WELL

Fifth Annual Exhibit by Vermont Poultry Assn.

IN CHURCH STREET HALL

There Are About 900 Birds in Coops Arranged About the Room, Making an Interesting Sight—Judging of Stock Already Started.

The fifth annual exhibition of the Vermont Poultry association opened in the old Methodist church on Church street today with a large number of birds on display. Poultrymen from New Hampshire, New York, Massachusetts and the four corners of Vermont were present to the number of fifty. Nine hundred birds, approximately, are already at the exhibition, and it is confidently expected that this number will be increased to a thousand before the premiums are all awarded. Early in the day, the work of judging the winners began and will continue until the exhibition closes Friday night. Mr. Card of Manchester, Conn., has been secured to act in the capacity of judge and he is assisted by other men familiar with poultry breeding.

A corner of the exhibition room has been fitted into an office and this morning Secretary Edward Chesser was kept busy registering the exhibits. Up to this afternoon the list of exhibitors totaled seventy. Others will be enrolled as the show progresses. Among the prominent poultrymen present at the opening of the exhibition this forenoon were Dr. B. Brenner of Granville, N. Y., C. I. Hatch of Waterbury, and Dr. Coolidge of Randolph. Over 40 different varieties of hens are already exhibited. Although the total number of birds on display is not quite as large as in former years, it is the general opinion that the last day of the meeting will see the number as large as any other time. Judge Card believed that the quality of birds was even better than in other years. He congratulated the officers of the association on the high standard of excellence which the birds represented this year have reached.

The interior of the exhibition room is taken up largely with the coops. These structures are placed in well arranged avenues about the hall and permit the judges and exhibitors to move about freely without coming in contact with each other. Expert poultry breeders are present and are glad to conduct the visitors around and explain the differences in the birds and to give any other information desired.

Thursday afternoon will be set apart for children to visit the show. During this time any child under twelve years of age will be admitted free if accompanied by its father, mother or some other person of mature age. Poultry men will be present to point out the different varieties on exhibition and discuss their characteristics and distinguishing features.

The association invites anyone to attend its annual exhibit of poultry and pet stock. The shows are not held for profit, but in the interests of the poultry industry. The cockle of the heart in this country is fast swelling into a mighty ocean, statistics showing that there are 233,598,000 chickens of laying age in this country valued at $70,000,000. Hence not to only the fancier and practical poultry man will the exhibition prove profitable and interesting, but also to those not actively engaged in the poultry industry.

CHILD NEARLY KILLED, WOMAN LOST FINGER

Miss Abbie Minor and Farr Child Run Down by Team in Wainfield.

Samuel Little's Horse Was Killed—Arrests Follow.

State's Attorney J. Ward Carver is in Wainfield today investigating the case resulting from a runaway which occurred there Saturday evening, in which Miss Abbie Minor lost the end of one finger, the three-year-old daughter of A. E. Farr was badly injured and narrowly escaped death, a horse owned and driven by Samuel Little of Fayston was killed, and two men were arrested for alleged intoxication.

It was about 7 o'clock Saturday evening when Glad Griffith and Harvey Tabor, both of Wainfield, drove into that place with a lively team belonging in Moretown. Both young men are said to have been intoxicated and were driving at a rapid pace. As they neared the village, they overtook Samuel Little, and they were driving so rapidly that Little's horse was frightened and both teams dashed madly through the street. Near the post office they overtook an old team, and in order to pass, Little went on one side and Griffith on the other.

Miss Minor was driving the Farr child on a sled on the path at the side of the road where Griffith turned out and, as he did not see them, he ran over them both. Miss Minor was found to be uninjured except that nearly an inch was taken off the end of the middle finger of one hand, but the Farr child was badly hurt. A gash four inches long was cut in her forehead, several stitches being necessary to close it; her face was bruised, one eye closed, and it is feared she may be internally injured. Since the accident she has been unable to stand, and it is possible that a bone in one leg is cracked. She suffers great pain.

Little, who was on the opposite side of the road from where the accident occurred, stopped his team, but the other team, containing Griffith and Tabor, the former driving, proceeded for some distance before stopping the team. When they finally turned and came back, they were driving at a fair rate of speed and were unable to stop the team when they reached the Little horse, and the thill of the sleigh penetrated the animal's breast and penetrated a vein, so that the horse bled to death on the spot. It was valued at $120.

Griffith and Little were arrested on the charge of intoxication, and it is expected that Tabor will also be taken into custody.

POLICE STRUGGLED WITH A SANDOW

Landed Edward Cook In a Cell Only After Going Through One of the Toughest Experiences of Their Career.

Two cases of intoxication and one for larceny constituted all the police court business over the Christmas holidays. Edward Cook of South Barre pleaded guilty this morning to a first offense of intoxication and was fined a fine, with costs, amounting to $13.14. Cook gave the officers one of the hardest tussles to land him in the lockup that they have had in a long time. Cook with two other men first came to grief on Washington street opposite Richardson street, where the sleigh in which they were riding tipped over, scattering the trio into the street. They managed to hang onto the horse team, but did not get away, but Cook became cranky and began to scarp with his companions.

A large crowd of people was attracted to the scene and Constable M. B. Nichols, who resides on Richardson street, soon appeared and placed Cook under arrest. The presence of an officer had no quieting effect on the man, and it took half a dozen men from the crowd to finally land him into a two-story sleigh from Eron & Gow's stable, which was stopped as it was going by. In the meantime a telephone message had been sent to the police station and officer Gamble responded. He met the team, in which Cook was finally landed, at the Spaulding school. As Cook was struggling for all he was worth, the officer got into the sleigh and helped to hold him in, but before the sleigh was reached, Cook gave a lunge and bent back the seat of the sleigh so that he and the officers rolled out into the street.

Officer Gamble then tried to put the handcuffs onto Cook's wrist but got them fastened only to one wrist when Cook pulled his arm away and, striking the handcuffs on the ice in the street, bent the lock so that they could not be fastened. The two officers and two other men then picked Cook up and carried him into the station. More trouble was then experienced when the officers tried to search his clothes before locking him up. In the fracas this time Cook not only fought with his hands and feet but bit officer Gamble's hands and John Papin, who was assisting, had one finger so badly lacerated by the man's teeth that services of a physician were needed to dress the wound.

Yesterday morning Henry Rogers was arraigned in court on the charge of the larceny of two horse blankets belonging to Frank Hamel. Rogers pleaded guilty and paid a fine of $10, with costs of $7.00. Irving Soles was arrested Friday, charged with being implicated in his theft, but the state's attorney decided that he had nothing to do with it and not pressed the case against him. Rogers was arrested Sunday morning by Deputy Sheriff Morris.

David Taylor pleaded guilty to a subsequent offense of intoxication yesterday morning and was allowed to sign the pledge on payment of the costs which amounted to $8.94.

TREES LOADED WITH GIFTS

Exercises Held Throughout Barre Last Night

AMID THE YULETIDE CHEER

Barre Salvation Army Corps Satisfied the Inner Wants of 200 People, Through the Co-operation of Many in Barre.

The glad Christmastide was appropriately celebrated in all the Barre churches and in the homes throughout the city. On Sunday, Christmas day, the services in the churches were especially enjoyable and in general largely attended. The churches were beautifully decorated and the special musical programs and sermons made the services very impressive. Many of the choirs were assisted by orchestras, and lengthy programs were rendered. The Christmas tree exercises for the Sunday school children were held by the Universalist and Presbyterian churches last Friday evening, and in other churches on Sunday and Monday.

The Christmas tree exercises at the Baptist church were last evening, and the church was well filled with people, both old and young. A large evergreen tree, stationed on the platform was fairly topped with the weight of the many gifts placed upon it, and after the exercises were over Santa Claus, impersonated by Fred Inglis, distributed the gifts among the happy children. Among the social presentations many were a purse of gold to Miss Ethel Inglis, the organist, and to W. H. Messer, the leader of the choir, as a small token of appreciation from the members of the church. The program consisted of a recitation by Agnes Allen; song by Thelma Perry; recitation by Paul Greason; song by Karna Cheney; exercise, "Santa Claus' Nap," by Santa Claus, "Wind Fairies, Dryads, Snow Fairies, Brownie Workers and others," by Santa Claus.

At Heading M. E. church Sunday evening a pleasing concert was given by the whole Sunday school and at 4 o'clock Monday afternoon the children of the primary department met in the church and were presented gifts from a beautifully trimmed Christmas tree.

Christmas tree exercises for the little folks of the Congregational church were held in the auditorium at 5 o'clock last evening with a large attendance. The interior of the room was prettily festooned in colors appropriate for the season. Two large Christmas trees, loaded with a present and a bag of candy for every member of the Sunday school, were attractively decorated with numerous incandescent lights. An extensive program was carried out, in charge of the school teachers.

The program follows: Processional, choruses; "The Star of Bethlehem," choir; "The Song of the Bells," Gerald Dutton; "The Christmas Story" (scripture) five young ladies; prayer, pastor; "The Angels' Song," choir; recitation, "Christmas Bells," Gordon Hay; recitation, "A Little Boy," William Wiley; recitation, "What I Want," Mark Carpenter; "Little Snowflakes," primary chorus; exercise, "Around the Christmas Tree," primary class; song, "While Shepherds Watched," four girls and chorus; recitation, "If You Had a Quarter," William McDonald; recitation, "Christmas," Marguerite Rowe; "Jesus Came to Save," chorus; recitation, "The Best Gift," Alice McLeod; song, "Set a Candle in the Window," four girls; recitation, "The Unseen Christmas Tree," Madeline McDonald; chant, "A Message," recitation, "A Good Plan," Ethel Woodruff; exercise, "Around the Christmas Tree," intermediate class; song, "Why Don't the Clocks Go Faster," primary class; recitation, "Aunt Broom's Shopping Advice," Rita Line; song, "The Straight Line Club," junior boys; recitation, "A Reason for Haste," Martha Wood.

The distribution of the gifts was preceded by a musical program, including which all of the classes participated. James Adie, acting as Santa Claus, then stripped the trees of the presents. The Christmas tree exercises of the Universalist church were held in the church vestry Friday evening. A very interesting program was given by the children of the Sunday school, including the following numbers: Singing by the Sunday school chorus; welcome, James McLeod; exercise by the primary, children, Beatrice More, Elizabeth Page, Madeline Page, Eskimo song, Rachel Cutler and Pricilla Page; "What Christmas Is," Ethel McFarland; "The Christmas Star," Rachel Hollister; song, Earl Hutchins; "Our Christmas," Richard Robinson; "Visit of the Shepherds," Merle Gaffron; "In Bethlehem," Greenleaf Bassett; song, Walter Tobin; "Little Lord Jesus," Glenora Steele; "If You Had a Quarter," Willie Clark; song, "Big, Baze's," William Clark; song, Gertrude Ennis; singing, Sunday school chor. THOUGHT MAN DEAD BUT HE FOOLED 'EM

John Jones of Montpelier Had Simply Fallen Down Stairs and Spilled Quite An Amount of Blood.

With blood streaming profusely from the nose and both ears, John Jones of Montpelier was discovered lying at the base of a staircase at 17 Addison place last Sunday afternoon by a resident of the house, Monroe S. Brown, who heard a commotion in the hall and opened the door leading thereto, to find the prostrate body of Jones wallowing in his own blood. Brown immediately summoned Chief Sinclair of the police force, who called Dr. M. D. Lamb as soon as he arrived on the scene. At first sight the injured man looked as though dead, but a closer examination revealed signs of life. A lively team was secured and Jones was taken to the City hospital, where he remained unconscious for several hours.

In the meantime, the officers instituted a rigid examination of the premises and closely questioned the occupants of the house, in which the accident occurred. The lower part of the tenement is occupied by Monroe Brown, who was the first person to see Jones after the fall. An Italian family lives on the second floor. In a room adjoining the apartments, Chief Sinclair found a tray containing several bottles and wine glasses. The occupants of the second-story tenement disclaim any knowledge of the affair and say that Jones' presence in the house is a mystery. Brown also denies any knowledge of the affair, although he tells of going up stairs earlier in the afternoon and assisting Jones to a chair, from which he had fallen. The police are satisfied, however, that the unfortunate man fell down the stairs while in a drunken stupor and that there was no attempt at foul play.

To-day he is resting as comfortably as possible and has entirely regained consciousness. He says that he is unmarried and that he cannot remember just how the accident happened. It is thought that he will be able to leave the hospital within a week.

200 PEOPLE WERE FED

Through the Agency of the Salvation Army of Barre.

Two hundred people were fed Saturday, thanks to the kind friends about the city and to Capt. and Mrs. Thorne of the Salvation Army. Saturday was Salvation Army tag day and people about the city responded liberally, a few refusing to buy a tag. The manager of the dance conducted by the Woodmen in the Howland hall was so kind as
